Clinton Tops Rivals in Cash

Campaign rakes in $27M in third quarter, besting Obama

WASHINGTON | Hillary Rodham Clinton defied the usual slow flow of summer money, tapping 100,000 new donors and outpacing all other presidential candidates in the chase for campaign cash over the past three months.

The New York senator raised $27 million in the quarter — $22 million for the primaries and $5 million for the general election — while other candidates fell victim to the traditional third-quarter dip in fundraising.

For the first time, Clinton reported attracting more new donors in a quarter than her chief fundraising rival, Illinois Sen. Barack Obama. And, for the first time, she raised more primary election money than he did.

Both candidates have now raised about $80 million each since the beginning of the year, Tuesday's updated figures showed.

Obama still leads Clinton in primary money. He has raised nearly $75 million toward the nominating contests to her $62.6 million — a figure that does not include the $10 million she transferred from her 2006 Senate campaign.

In the rarefied fundraising space that Clinton and Obama occupy, the differences are fairly insignificant. But their money sets them apart from the rest of the Democratic field and supplies them with resources to run lengthy and expensive campaigns. JIM KUHNHEIN (AP)

'Give Me $200,000 In Unmarked Grape'

A man who pulled up to a Wisconsin bank's drive-up window on an all-terrain vehicle and demanded money on Monday was not happy about the sweet response: the teller had only candy. Even though the suspect had held up a bag that he said contained a bomb, the Stone Lake Bank teller explained the money had already been removed from the till and all she had were suckers, Sawyer County sheriff's Chief Deputy Tim Zeigle said. Zeigle said the suspect, who wore camouflage clothing and a black helmet and face mask, fled in frustration and had not been caught. (AP)

Why There's No Parking at Tysons

The leader of a Providence, R.I., artists cooperative was sentenced to probation for setting up a secret apartment in a mall parking garage. Michael Townsend, 36, said he and seven others built the 750-square-foot apartment beginning in 2003 and lived there for up to three weeks at a time. A cinderblock wall and nondescript utility door kept the loft hidden.

Inside, the pad was fully furnished, though without running water (instead, they used mall bathrooms). Townsend said he was inspired by a holiday ad that featured a "female voice talking about how great it would be if you could live at the mall." (AP)

Somewhere, a Care Bear Just Died

If you need a hug, you won't get it at Percy Julian Middle School in Oak Park, Ill. Principal Victoria Sharts banned hugging among the school's 860 students anywhere inside the building. She said students were forming "hug lines" that made them late for classes and crowded the hallways. "Hugging is really more appropriate for airports or for family reunions than passing and seeing each other every few minutes in the halls," Sharts said. Another reason was that some hugs could be too long and too close, she said. (AP)

Teenage Girl Found After Leaving With Sex Offender

A teenage girl who ran away to rendezvous with a high-risk sex offender she met on MySpace.com was found safe at a store 400 miles from her home on Tuesday, while the search for the 46-year-old man continued, a sheriff said. The girl, 15, was located at a Wal-Mart in the Florida Panhandle, the sheriff said. The girl told authorities the two separated when Mitchell took her into the store. (AP)

Blackwater CEO Defends Workers

Chairman casts his company as scapegoat for problems in Iraq

WASHINGTON | Blackwater chairman Erik Prince vigorously rejected charges Tuesday that guards from his private security firm acted like a bunch of cowboys immune to legal prosecution while protecting State Department personnel in Iraq and Afghanistan.

"I believe we acted appropriately at all times," Prince calmly told the House Oversight and Government Reform Committee.

His testimony came as the FBI is investigating Blackwater personnel for their role in a Sept. 16 shootout that left 11 Iraqis dead. The incident and others — including a shooting by a drunk Blackwater employee after a 2006 Christmas party — led to pointed questions by lawmakers about whether the government is relying too much on private contractors who fall outside the military courts martial system.

"We're not getting our money's worth when we have so many complaints about innocent people being shot," said Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., committee chairman, at the conclusion of a hearing that lasted nearly six hours. "And it's unclear whether they're actually being investigated by the State Department, because we haven't had any cooperation."

Prince cast his company as a scapegoat for broader problems associated with the government's reliance on security contractors and the murky legal jurisdiction.

He said his staff was comprised of courageous individuals who face the same threats and high-stress environment as U.S. military personnel, and noted 30 Blackwater personnel have been killed and no Americans have died under the company's watch.

Often leaning back to listen to the advice of his lawyer, Prince repeatedly refused to say whether former Blackwater employees were guilty of murder and said it should be up to the Justice Department to pursue charges against contractors who commit crimes overseas.

In the case of the Christmas eve shooting, Prince said the company fired and fined the individual.

"But we, as a private organization, can't do any more," he told the House panel. "We can't flog him. We can't incarcerate him. That's up to the Justice Department. We are not empowered to enforce U.S. law."

Jury: Exec Was Harassed

Woman gets $11.6M for mistreatment by Knicks coach Thomas

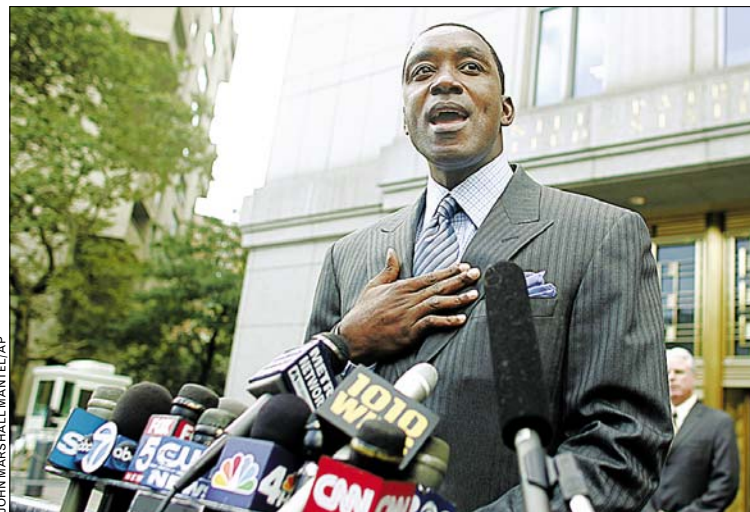

NEW YORK | In an end to a salacious three-week trial, a jury ordered the owners of the New York Knicks to pay $11.6 million to a former team executive after finding she endured two years of crude insults and unwanted advances from coach Isiah Thomas.

The jury of four women and three men found that both Thomas and Madison Square Garden had sexually harassed Anucha Browne Sanders. But they also decided that only MSG and Chairman James Dolan should pay punitive damages for the harassment and for firing the plaintiff from her $260,000-a-year job out of spite.

The result: The Garden owes $6 million for condoning a hostile work environment and $2.6 million for retaliation. MSG chairman James Dolan owes $3 million.

Outside court, a beaming Browne Sanders, 44, insisted her victory was more about sending a message than the money.

"What I did here, I did for every working woman in America," she said.

Earlier, Thomas emerged from the federal courthouse in lower Manhattan with his trademark smile but flashed anger as he reasserted his innocence amid a crush of reporters and cameras.

"I'm extremely disappointed that the jury did not see the facts in this case," he said. "I will appeal this, and I remain confident in the man that I am and what I stand for, and the family that I have."

In a statement, MSG also denied any wrongdoing in the case.

Jurors — who needed roughly two days to decide on the allegations but only about an hour to determine damages — declined to talk about the verdict or how they came to their decision. TOM HAYS (AP)

AMERICAN STEEL. GLOBAL STRENGTH. GLOBAL SOLUTIONS.

America's steelmakers set an environmental standard the world's steelmakers should follow.

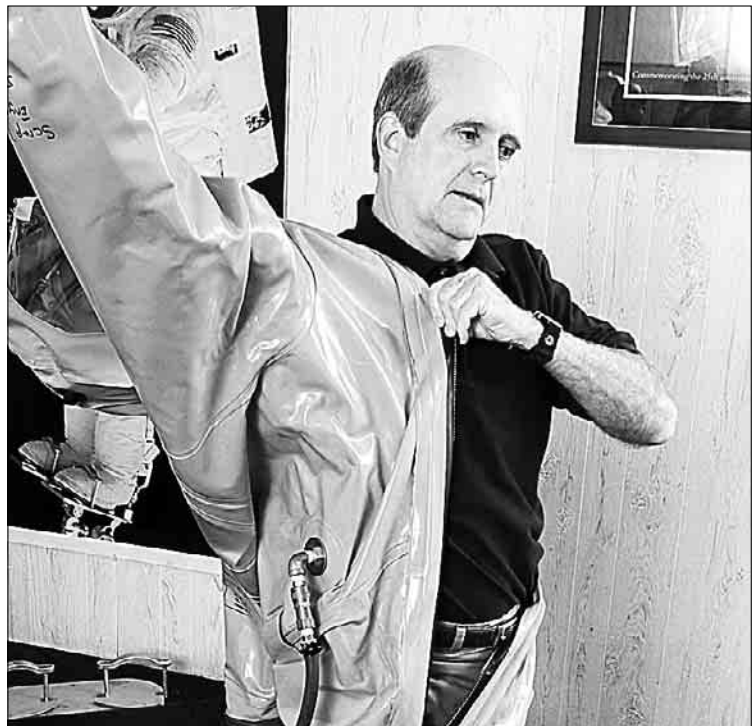

American steelmakers lead the way in recycling and environmental performance. We're ahead of Kyoto greenhouse emission goals by 240 percent, and we're developing innovative technologies to continue setting new benchmarks. Unfortunately, not all global steelmakers share this commitment. Lax environmental standards are one way some overseas steelmakers aren't shouldering their fair share. Accidents Plague Germ Labs in U.S.

Mishaps increasing at facilities that deal with biological agents

WASHINGTON | American laboratories handling the world's deadliest germs and toxins have experienced more than 100 accidents and missing shipments since 2003, and the number is increasing steadily as more labs across the country are approved to do the work.

No one died, and regulators said the public was never at risk during these incidents. But the documented cases reflect poorly on procedures and oversight at high-security labs, some of which work with organisms and poisons so dangerous that illnesses they cause have no cure.

The mishaps include workers' being bitten or scratched by infected animals, skin cuts, needle sticks and more, according to a review by The Associated Press of confidential reports submitted to federal regulators.

The number of accidents has risen steadily. Through August, the most recent period covered in the reports the AP obtained, labs

BUTT OUT: As part of its efforts to spruce up the city ahead of the 2008 Olympic Games, Beijing has banned smoking for drivers and passengers in all of the city's 66,000 taxis, the Xinhua News Agency reported Tuesday.

OPENING CEREMONY: North Korea's Kim Jong Il shakes hands with South Korea's Roh Moo-Hyun Tuesday to open the summit.

Icy Start to Korea Summit

Kim Jong Il appears to give South Korea's Roh the cold shoulder

SEOUL, SOUTH KOREA | The first summit between the divided Koreas in seven years opened Tuesday to cheers from hundreds of thousands of North Koreans, but their leader gave the visiting South Korean president a chillier reception.

The words "I'm glad to meet you" were apparently the only ones North Korean leader Kim Jong Il uttered to South Korean President Roh Moo-hyun during their first encounter in the North's capital Pyongyang — a 12-minute welcoming ceremony to launch the three-day summit. The two did not have substantive talks.

This week's summit is only the second time leaders of the North and South have met since the Korean peninsula was divided after World War II.

Kim did not hold more meetings with Roh. Instead he let his deputy, the country's nominal head of state

Kim Yong Nam, deal with the South Koreans for the rest of the day. They held talks and the North hosted a banquet where Roh offered a toast to Kim Jong Il's health.

The North Korean leader's apparent snub came after the welcoming ceremony, where he showed scant enthusiasm and seldom smiled.

That contrasted with a friendly reception that the North's leader gave to Roh's predecessor, Kim Dae-jung, at the first-ever summit in 2000.

It was unclear what made Kim appear less enthusiastic in what could be an ominous sign for two rounds of official talks between the two leaders set for Wednesday.

A top North Korean diplomat said the summit will open up new possibilities for "peace, co-prosperity and the reunification." "Nothing is more urgent and important than the reunification of our nation, [which] has been living for more than half a century with the sufferings of territorial division imposed by outside forces," Vice Minister for Foreign Affairs Choe Su Hon told the U.N. General Assembly. JAE-SOON CHANG (AP)

LONDON Diana Inquest Begins

The British inquest into the deaths of Princess Diana and her companion focused quickly on a summer romance that ended in a horrific car crash. Lord Justice Scott Baker told the six women and five men selected for the jury on Tuesday that they must decide whether the deaths were an accident or — as the father of her companion Dodi Fayed contends — a murder orchestrated by Prince Philip and carried out by Britain's secret services. Fewer than a fourth of the seats reserved for the public were taken. (AP)

No Sign of Progress After Junta Meeting

U.N. envoy departs Myanmar after finally speaking to top leader

YANGON, MYANMAR | A U.N. envoy completed his mission to Myanmar on Tuesday with no word of progress on the military junta's refusal to address the people's insistent demands for democracy.

The envoy, Ibrahim Gambari, finally met with Myanmar's reclusive leader, Senior Gen. Than Shwe, in the remote capital of Naypyitaw after days of delays. Neither side issued any comment that could satisfy the world's hopes for a halt to the junta's harsh crackdown on protesters, which began last week.

Gambari then flew to Yangon to meet Aung San Suu Kyi, the detained pro-democracy leader. It was his second meeting in three days with the Nobel Peace Prize laureate, who has spent 12 of the last 18 years under house arrest.

As he flew out of the country, the United Nations released photos of a grim-faced Gambari and an equally somber Suu Kyi shaking hands at Myanmar's State Guest House.

Gambari is expected to brief U.N. Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon and the U.N. Security Council on Friday on his trip. (AP)

Violence in country spikes to highest level since U.S.-led invasion

KABUL, AFGHANISTAN | Violence in Afghanistan has spiked to its highest level since the 2001 U.S.-led invasion, with an Associated Press count of insurgency-related deaths this year surpassing the 5,000 mark and a U.N. report finding that attacks have risen by 20 percent.

A suicide attack Tuesday on a police bus in western Kabul killed 13 officers and civilians, including a woman and her two children who boarded the vehicle seconds before the explosion.

A new U.N. report found that while 76 percent of all suicide bombings in the country have targeted international and Afghan security forces, 143 civilians were killed by those bombs through August. The report, released in New York last week, also found that Afghanistan has averaged 550 violent incidents per month this year, up from 425 last year. JASON STRAZIUSO (AP)

Musharraf Names Army Successor

ISLAMABAD, PAKISTAN | Gen. Pervez Musharraf sought Tuesday to smooth the way for his re-election as Pakistan's president, naming a successor as army chief and offering an amnesty to ex-premier and prospective anti-terror ally Benazir Bhutto.

However, die-hard Musharraf opponents launched new legal challenges and resigned from Parliament in a last-ditch bid to end the eight-year rule of a key U.S. ally.

Musharraf is running for another five-year presidential mandate in a ballot of federal and provincial lawmakers on Saturday. The government is predicting a comfortable victory for Musharraf, who is promising to step down from his powerful army post if he wins. (AP)

Britain Plans Further Iraq Drawdown

In unexpected visit, Brown says troop levels to be cut by 20 percent

BASRA, IRAQ | British Prime Minister Gordon Brown announced Tuesday that he was slashing the remaining British contingent in Iraq by nearly 20 percent. A beleaguered Iraqi leader said his own forces would be ready to take up the slack in the country's oil-rich southern-most province in two months.

Brown's one-day, unannounced swing through Iraq comes as U.S. military officials are concerned that the reduced British presence in the south could open security gaps along key supply and transit routes to Kuwait.

The roadways are a vital lifeline for U.S. forces. And everything that British Prime Minister Gordon Brown talks with British troops at their base in Basra, Iraq. Brown announced that 1,000 troops will be sent home by Christmas.

the Americans can't fly out of the country when they eventually leave must make the long and potentially dangerous road journey to Kuwait through Basra province.

Brown is said to be contemplating early elections in Britain, where the war is deeply unpopular. He arrived in Baghdad midmorning and went straight into a meeting with his Iraqi counterpart, Nouri al-Maliki.

"We are prepared to take over security of Basra within two months, and we will," al-Maliki said after the meeting in his Green Zone office.

Brown confirmed al-Maliki's plans and said, "as we move to overwatch, we can move down to 4,500" troops from the current level of 5,500. He promised to bring the 1,000 troops home by Christmas.

Israel Admits To September Airstrike in Syria

JERUSALEM | Israel on Tuesday eased a strict news blackout on an airstrike in Syria last month, allowing the first publication of reports it struck an unspecified "military target" deep inside Syrian territory.

Israel's military censor had imposed a total blackout on coverage of the Sept. 6 airstrike.

But on Tuesday, the office allowed preliminary details to be published after Syria's president, Bashar Assad, confirmed the airstrike in a televised interview.

"Israeli air force planes attacked a military target deep inside Syria on Sept. 6, the military censor allowed for publication today," Israel's Army Radio reported. (AP)

Harsh September For Ford, Toyota

Auto industry hits the skids again, but GM bucks downward trend

DETROIT | Weakness in the housing market and flagging consumer confidence made September another tough month for the auto industry, although General Motors, Honda and Nissan bucked the trend with hot-selling new vehicles, according to U.S. sales figures released Tuesday.

Ford Motor Co.'s U.S. sales plummeted 21 percent for the month, largely due to a 62 percent reduction in sales to rental car companies. Toyota Motor Corp. posted a 4 percent decline but still outpaced

Ford for the month and for the January-September period, continuing its drive to replace Ford as the nation's No. 2 automaker in sales after GM.

Overall, U.S. sales were down 3 percent from last September, according to Autodata Corp.

General Motors Corp. said sales were flat compared with last September, despite a month of difficult labor negotiations and a two-day strike by the United Auto Workers union.

GM produced 30,000 fewer vehicles because of the strike, but the walkout had no impact on sales, and GM's production schedule is unchanged, said GM's top sales analyst, Paul Ballew. DEE-ANN DURBIN (AP)

Malvo Apologizes to Victim's Family

Ariz. man's daughter brought to tears in phone call from killer

MCLEAN, VA. | Cheryll Witz was shopping for a birthday cake when her cellphone rang. Waiting to speak to her was one of the nation's most notorious serial killers — the man who killed her father five years ago. "I need to apologize for what I've done to you and your family," Lee Boyd Malvo told her Sept. 20. Witz stood, "bawling my eyes out," in the aisles of a Costco in Tucson, Ariz.

In March 2002, Malvo fatally shot Witz's father, Jerry Taylor, from long range as he practiced chip shots on a golf course in Tucson. The slaying was a precursor to a sniper spree that terrorized the Washington, D.C., area, in which the teenage Malvo and partner John Allen Muhammad killed 10 people and wounded three others over a three-week span beginning Oct. 2, 2002.

"The first thing he said was, 'I tried to write a letter to you, but I couldn't. I didn't know what to say," Witz said.

For personal reasons, Witz did not want to discuss all the details of the call, particularly those surrounding the exact circumstances of her father's death.

Witz remains angry but said it was important to her to hear Malvo's apology directly. "I told him that I was glad he didn't get the death penalty. I told him, 'You need to think about what you've done,'" Witz said.

Suspicious Takeoff Is Probed

WASHINGTON | Federal transportation officials said Tuesday they will open an investigation of a corporate jet being allowed to take off in the middle of the night last month from a runway that was closed at Dulles International Airport.

The private Learjet 35 was cleared for takeoff about 3:13 a.m. on Sept. 12 by a Dulles tower controller, according to the National Transportation Safety Board. Runway 19R had been closed earlier in the evening for surveying, and its runway lights were turned off.

There were no injuries or damage to the aircraft during the departure. But a radar controller in Warrenton, Va., noticed the aircraft taking off and asked whether the runway was open. The tower controller said the runway remained closed, according to the NTSB. Officials did not reveal who owned the aircraft. (AP)

Conservation Group's Files Hacked

ARLINGTON, VA. | A hacker illegally gained access to a computer of the Nature Conservancy, jeopardizing personal information on about 14,000 people including current and former employees, the group has confirmed.

The hacker gained access to the computer on Sept. 12. The stolen information included the names, addresses, Social Security numbers and birth dates of current and former U.S.-based employees of the nonprofit organization from the past seven years. It also included bank account numbers for employees who used direct deposit for payroll between 2000 and 2004. (AP)

Studying the Antidepressant Effects of Sleep Deprivation

Sleep deprivation has rapid & brief antidepressant effects in some depressed people. NIMH is exploring how a drug that mimics the effects of sleep deprivation in the brain, may also bring about a rapid antidepressant response in people who are depressed. Understanding how this works may help us understand depression and design better antidepressants. Study includes multiple overnight stays & free sleep evaluations to rule out sleep disorders. NIMH is seeking people ages 18-65 with depression who:

- Are free of other serious medical conditions
- Do not have any sleep disorders

Leave Fear on the Ledge

Bungee jumping is so easy in New Zealand, you'll have no excuse

ACTIVITIES | I stepped to the edge of the launch platform and poked my head over the side. I could see the tops of trees around an opening a couple of hundred feet below, where the rock face of the mountainside sloped almost straight down. The view sent a slight shiver down my spine and set off a flutter at the bottom of my stomach.

"You don't need to see where you're going," the guy tending the bungee site called "the Ledge" advised calmly in his New Zealand accent. "Are you ready?"

I've heard that some first-timers stall at this point and think things over, but this was no time for thinking.

Well, I could stall a little.

I grabbed a section of the bungee line and inspected it, as if that would make a difference. Hundreds of little rubber bands, laced smartly together. The bungee guy picked up on my last-minute curiosity. "It's well-used," he said pleasantly.

Thanks.

He suggested I stand behind a red line painted across the platform, a few feet back from the edge, to give a little oomph to my launch, and count down "five, four, three, two, one."

There's a difference between fear and terror.

Terror is a tsunami of an adrenaline rush that washes through your body when your feet leave the plat-

Associated Press writer Glenn Adams takes the plunge from "the Ledge." The gondola ride up the mountain and the jump both afford gorgeous views of Lake Wakatipu.

form and you begin your free-fall. Nothing to grab on to, no way to turn back. You and the bungee, that's all.

Fear is something else. For me, it was the fear I felt of getting on the plane headed back home if I didn't jump and hearing that little voice saying over and over, "coulda, shoulda, woulda."

I'll take terror, thank you.

I didn't go to New Zealand with plans to make the 154-foot leap. On the way to Queenstown on the South Island, our driver slowed down at the bridge where bungee jumpers were preparing for their leaps. Then we drove down "bungee alley," a street lined with adventure sports outfitters in the lakeside town that's surrounded by mountains. Nobody said a word, but I felt myself being lured in.

Then, while taking a cable-car ride to the top of the mountain 1,500 or so feet above Queenstown, I spotted the bungee platform. The urge struck. But I waited.

The next day, I decided to find out more — only for the purposes of my travel story, of course. It was about $110. And, are they booked all day? No, I was told by a pretty attendant. In fact, you can go now. She smiled wide. I took it as a challenge, and signed up. See, it's all your fault, readers.

The rest was easy. Wear anything you want. Step on the scales so they can write your weight on your hand, in kilos, of course — 74 for me or about 163 pounds — and answer some questions about your health. Sign the disclaimer, then step to the launch pad to be rigged up. I chose the mid-body harness that attaches the bungee to a steel loop on the small of my back.

The rest, well, it's easy as flying.

THE SIXTH YEAR

NEW YORK CITY, N.Y.

A lone man, a flag and a healing city — so broke the morning of Sept. 11, 2007. Pulitzer Prize-winning AP photographer Oded Balilty spoke with Express about capturing this photograph.

INTERVIEW BY CHRIS COMBS

“He looked so comfortable.”

It was so sad, and I was sure that the guy was sad as well. [But] it seemed to me like thousands of people ... came to pay their respects — not exactly for the country; it was very interesting to see this guy cover himself with his flag.

"I think [memorials are necessary] to put people into perspective. The relatives don't really need the ceremonies; they have, I'm sure, their ceremonies, in a way, in a spiritual way, in every way.

"I find it difficult to shoot very emotional things ... more difficult to shoot than ... when there is shooting or fire.

"And now, what's next? To go on and tell stories: some that people know, and I'll try to tell more stories that people don't know. That's our mission, that's our job — to be storytellers. That's all we do."

Close Calls Feed the Replay Debate

Rockies say they were unlucky even before the questionable slide

BASEBALL PLAYOFFS | So what if Matt Holliday didn't touch the plate? The Colorado Rockies figure their 13-inning thriller against San Diego shouldn't have gone extra innings in the first place.

Garrett Atkins hit what the Rockies argued was a line-drive homer in the seventh inning Monday night, but umpires Fieldin Culbreth and Tim Tschida quickly ruled the ball hit the yellow railing on the left-field wall and bounced back into play.

That left Atkins with a standup double and the Rockies with a 6-5 lead, which they squandered an inning later, setting the stage for five more tension-filled innings before Colorado won on another confusing call.

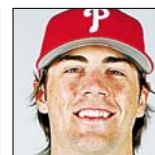

Fans in the left-field bleachers argued Atkins' drive hit a fence above the yellow outline and caromed back onto the field, which would make it a home run.

Rockies manager Clint Hurdle, is becoming baseball's biggest pro-

Why not do what the NBA and NFL have done, he argues, in allowing today's technology to help settle such disputes?

Atkins didn't really have a take on this latest long-ball labyrinth.

"I was running, so I didn't get a look at it," he said. "You'd like to think it would be a homer, that we get one of those calls to go our way. Luckily it turned out that it didn't matter. The guys came up with three runs in the 13th to take it from them, so it was good."

Even then, plate umpire Tim McClelland's delayed safe call was debatable — Holliday never appeared to touch home plate before catcher Michael Barrett retrieved Brian Giles' throw and tagged the slugger who was splayed on the ground, his chin bleeding and his head dazed from the head-first dive.

Holliday said he couldn't recall touching the plate "but the umpire said I did." ARNIE STAPLETON (AP)

Mets Will Stick With Randolph Despite Collapse

BASEBALL | Mets manager Willie Randolph will be back with the club next season, hanging onto his job after New York's enormous collapse.

General manager Omar Minaya made the announcement Tuesday, ending speculation that Randolph might be fired despite signing a contract extension before this season.

"I do believe that Willie is going to continue to work hard," Minaya said. "I do believe that Willie's passion for winning is there."

New York went 5-12 down the stretch, squandering its big lead in the NL East and missing the playoffs entirely.

"It's been tough sleeping," Randolph said. JAY COHEN (AP)

Young's Comeback Is the NL's Best

Nats first baseman came into the year with nothing guaranteed

NATIONALS | After a year of professional, legal, medical and substance abuse problems, Dmitri Young was on the bottom rung of baseball when he arrived at Washington Nationals spring training in February.

All he had was a non-guaranteed minor league contract, a warning there would be "zero tolerance" if he caused any trouble and a generous dose of self-doubt. He practiced on an auxiliary field with prospects, well separated from the players on the major league roster.

On Tuesday, Young was chosen as Major League Baseball's NL comeback player of the year, feted by his team as an inspirational clubhouse leader who flirted with the league's batting title and earned a nice new contract.

"This puts the stamp on everything I've been through, and what I accomplished this year from an individual standpoint," Young said. "And I shed some tears, I looked back, thought about my kids immediately, my parents, my brother and my sisters, all the friends who stuck with me when I was at my absolute lowest, and then the people I met along the way on my way back up."

Young, who made the roster as the starting first baseman when Nick Johnson was unable to play because of an injury, finished tied for eighth in the NL in batting with a career-high .320 average. He had 13 home runs and 74 RBI.

It was Young's best season at the plate since hitting .302 with 21 homers and 69 RBIs for the Cincinnati Reds in 2001.

"I started getting that love back for the game, every single day," said Young, who turns 34 this month. "Baseball became fun. I didn't have fun last year."

Carlos Pena of the Tampa Bay Devil Rays was the AL winner. The winners were selected by reporters for MLB.com. JOSEPH WHITE (AP)

Redskins Give 2nd Chances

In his 2nd stint in D.C., Gibbs has struggled holding onto the lead

REDSKINS | During his first stint as coach of the Washington Redskins, no one preserved a lead like Joe Gibbs. His teams were virtually invincible with an 86-11 mark when leading at halftime. In fact, his teams lost just three times at home in the regular season when leading after two quarters from 1981-1992.

Gibbs' second stint as the Redskins' coach, however, has been a different story. Since ending his retirement in 2004, no NFL coach has lost more times despite leading at the start of the second half.

The are many reasons for the Redskins' second-half collapses in recent years. In certain games, Washington's offense has appeared to go conservative, too quickly, often forcing it to settle for field goals instead of touchdowns. In others, the offense has abandoned its strength — the running game — or turned the ball over too frequently, or has seemingly been victimized by questionable play-calling or clock management. And at times, the defense has simply been overwhelmed by a superior offense.

But whatever the cause, since 2004 the Redskins have lost 11 times with a halftime lead, tied with Oakland for most in the NFL, according to the Elias Sports Bureau, which specializes in sports statistics. The latest came to the New Yorks before the Redskins' bye week.

Gibbs, asked about the trend this week, said he saw the issue as a series of isolated incidents and said it was not indicative of a systemic problem with the team.

"For us, I think, each year is a new year," Gibbs said. "Hopefully, for us what [the Giants loss] was this year was a lesson for us. You've got to have great intensity for a full four quarters; certainly we do as a team. We've played three games this year, and it's all come down to the last play and any lead is not a safe lead."

Thomas Held Out Of Training Camp

Wizards center is not cleared to play after heart issue discovered

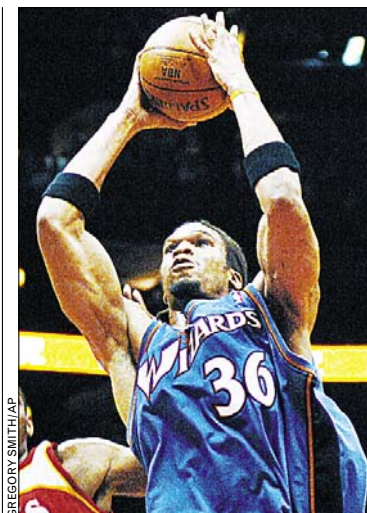

WIZARDS | Wizards center Etan Thomas was held out at the start of training camp Tuesday after a cardiac test showed an irregularity during a routine medical exam. It's not known how long he will be sidelined.

"He's not cleared to play," Wizards coach Eddie Jordan said. "He's disappointed, obviously. He's concerned. We're all concerned."

Thomas, 29, will have more tests before his status is determined, and Jordan's guess was that nothing will be resolved before training camp closes Saturday.

"This came to us unexpected," Wizards president Ernie Grunfeld said. "We want to be cautious and make sure that we do whatever is in Etan's interest, long term."

Before word of Thomas' condition emerged, Jordan had said the player would compete during the preseason with Brendan Haywood for a spot in the starting lineup. They both spent time as the starting center in 2006-07, when Thomas averaged 6.1 points and 5.8 rebounds in his sixth NBA season, all with the Wizards.

"It's a tough thing, because you hate to see somebody of that young age with a heart problem. It seems unreal. We wish him the best," Haywood said after the first of two practice sessions Tuesday.

Turner impresses his teammates, coaches in Saturday's upset

TERPS FOOTBALL | Chris Turner's curly blond hair and laid-back California attitude have made him popular with the coeds at Maryland.

Now it has earned him a starting job. After going 14-for-20 for 149 yards while engineering four second-half scoring drives in a stunning 34-24 upset of then-No. 10 Rutgers, Turner will start Saturday against Georgia Tech in an important ACC matchup.

The Terps (3-2, 0-1) can only hope Turner shows the same composure against Georgia Tech as he did at Rutgers. Entering in relief of injured QB Jordan Steffy, Turner quickly convinced his teammates that he was ready to go.

"Right after the first play," receiver Danny Oquendo said. "Usually, a backup quarterback comes in that situation and is nervous and jittery. But he was really poised out there."

Friedgen listed Steffy as "questionable" for Saturday. The QB attended practice Monday but has not yet been cleared to play. (AP)

To Pay, or Not to Pay

Radiohead asks that you decide how much its new album is worth

INNOVATION | The great riddle facing the record industry in the digital age has been pricing — Napster and its ilk offered up music for "free" in the late 1990s, while major labels largely have clung to an average of $13 for CDs despite plummeting sales and seasons of downsizing.

Now, one of the most acclaimed rock bands in the world, Radiohead, is answering that marketplace riddle with a shrug: "It's up to you," reads a message on the Web page where fans can pre-order the band's seventh album and pay whatever they choose, including nothing.

The British band that twice has been nominated for a best-album Grammy will sidestep the conventional industry machinery Oct. 10 by releasing "In Rainbow" as a digital download with no set price. The album will be available only from the band and Radiohead.com, the band's official site.

It might sound like a gimmicky promotion, but industry observers Monday framed it in more historical terms — Radiohead, they said, is the right band at the right time to blaze a trail of its own choosing.

OK COMPUTER: Thom Yorke and Radiohead will keep it disparate by selling their next album online with a price tag of TBD.

A high-profile manager said he was still trying to process the boldness of the Radiohead venture: "My head is spinning, honestly," said Kelly Curtis, who represents Seattle band Pearl Jam. "It's very cool and very inspiring, really."

Radiohead is hardly abandoning the idea of making money.

The Web site also will sell a deluxe edition of "In Rainbow" that comes with versions in three formats (CD, vinyl and download) along with eight bonus songs and a lavish hardcover book with lyrics, photos and a slipcase. That package costs 40 British pounds (about $82).

In upcoming weeks, Courtyard Management, which represents the band, reportedly will negotiate with labels about a conventional release for "In Rainbow" that would put it on store shelves in 2008. Sources with the band acknowledge that the major labels might balk at the notion of releasing an album that has been available for free for months. Still, previous Radiohead albums collectively sell about 300,000 copies per year, according to Nielsen SoundScan, so "In Rainbow" still should have value at the cash register.

Pearl Jam and other groups with intense followings — such as the Dave Matthews Band, R.E.M., Metallica and Nine Inch Nails — likely will learn from Radiohead's experience, Curtis said. "Everyone will keep an eye on this because this is the most exciting thing we've seen to this point." GEOFF BOUCHER AND CHRIS LEE (LOS ANGELES TIMES)

The Holiday Necessity

'The Jungle Book' is the answer to all your kid-gifting questions

DVD | The holiday gift-giving season is fast approaching, and that means it's time for Disney to give another of its classic animated tales the "platinum-edition" treatment. This time "The Jungle Book" ($30), which celebrates its 40th anniversary this year, receives the honor.

Mowgli has been remastered for this two-disc set. The result is a sharper, brighter view of the more-lovable-than-ferocious beasts who inhabit the Walt Disney cartoon-wild. Of course, kids accustomed to the pristine, digitally animated Pixar flicks may not find this movie quite as eye-popping, but that's only because "The Jungle Book" — with its hand-drawn characters and backgrounds that resemble paintings — is Disney done the old-school way.

In addition to earning an Oscar nomination for its most famous song, the catchy "Bare Necessities," "The Jungle Book" is best known as the last animated movie Walt Disney worked on before succumbing to lung cancer. He died almost a year before the film was released, but his influence — as the many bonus features on the DVD make clear — can be seen and felt throughout all of its 78 minutes.

The extras in the collection follow the template laid out by previous Disney DVDs — viewers will find a well-done making-of documentary; several respectable featurettes; a few so-so games for the little ones; and a peek at what wound up on the cutting room floor. JEN CHANEY (WASHINGTONPOST.COM)

Hannah Montana is the hottest, and the priciest, act out there

TICKETS | Forget the Police, Justin Timberlake or Bruce Springsteen. The undisputed hottest concert ticket of the year is for 14-year-old pop star Miley Cyrus, star of the Disney Channel's "Hannah Montana" TV show.

Fans are so desperate for seats to her 54-date tour, kicking off later this month, that venues have sold out in as little as four minutes, and scalpers are getting four to five times the face value — creating a torrent of complaints from frustrated parents.

One ticket for the show in Charlotte, N.C., sold for $2,565.

Miley, daughter of country music singer Billy Ray Cyrus, plays high school student Miley Stewart, who lives a secret double life as a famous pop star, Hannah Montana. Her show reaches 5 million viewers per week.

The sold-out "Best of Both Worlds Tour," which begins Oct. 18, follows the release of her double album, "Hannah Montana 2/Meet Miley Cyrus," which has already sold more than 1 million copies.

WHO KNEW? That the lip-synching offspring of Billy Ray Cyrus would do so well?

Paige Nace, 35, hoped to take her daughter to see Miley in Atlanta.

But in four minutes, tickets to the November show were gone. Nace said tickets were being resold for inflated prices on Web sites like eBay Inc.'s StubHub.

"Hannah Montana has essentially exposed a lot of frustration the average, uninformed ticket buyer has," said Sean Pate, a spokesman for StubHub. "There is so much demand that ticket sellers are pricing on the high side. It's almost unreasonable."

Soulja Boy, Without The Soul

The Internet star has little to offer on his debut studio album

MUSIC | The success of 17-year-old Atlanta rapper Soulja Boy is a prime example of how to build a novelty act from the ground up.

Long before his hit "Crank That (Soulja Boy)" topped Billboard charts and became a top-selling ringtone, the song reportedly helped him receive 10 million MySpace visits. And on YouTube,

He proves that 10 million MySpace visits does not a good album make.

a myriad of fans have uploaded homemade video clips featuring their own versions of the song's accompanying dance steps. The track, now unavoidable on urban radio, centers on electro-pan drum plunks, a nearly indecipherable chanted chorus and lyrics mostly about how Soulja Boy enlivens the party.

Now his major-label debut "SouljaBoytellem.com" — an aptly titled nod to his Internet fame — is a largely self-produced collection of similarly rudimentary rhymes, infectious hooks and space-age, synth-heavy beats. Yet the disc is about as formulaic and ultimately disposable as hip-hop can get. He's got the requisite rump odes ("Booty Meat" and "Donk"), product placement jams ("Bapes" and "Sidekick") and dance-move ditties ("Snap and Roll" and "Let Me Get Em"). Undermined by his own lack of depth, on the album closer, "Don't Get Mad," he says: "Don't get mad 'cause the kids like me." Soulja Boy may have a point: He has a populist's ear for what most young rap listeners crave — frothy, party-rocking anthems.

SOMEONE IS WATCHING, BUT WHO? For reasons unknown to anyone with a sense of humor, Comedy Central has renewed "Mind of Mencia," the unfortunate brainchild of comedian Carlos Mencia, for a fourth season with 10 new episodes.

Death Becomes Her

The love of Ned's life crosses over and back on 'Pushing Daisies'

DARK HUMOR Easily the most visually audacious and highly publicized new series of the season, "Pushing Daisies" (8 p.m., ABC) offers viewers a screwball cop comedy with the heart of a fable.

As a boy, Ned (Lee Pace) discovers his terrible gift. He can raise the dead with the touch of his hand. But if he ever touches that creature again, it will die instantly, and forever. And if he keeps a person alive for more than a minute, another soul in near proximity will perish on the spot.

"Daisies" is the brainchild of creators Bryan Fuller ("Wonderfalls") and Barry Sonnenfeld ("Men in Black"). The show's slick morbidity and ghoulish narrative owe more than a little to the works of Tim Burton ("Edward Scissorhands").

Later, adult Ned has retreated into an emotional shell and devotes himself to his pie restaurant. His mysterious distance becomes romantic catnip to his willing waitress (Kristin Chenoweth).

The tale comes full circle when Ned learns that his old sweetheart, Charlotte (Anna Friel), has become one of the sad victims he has to interrogate. How can he keep this supernatural romantic reunion to only one minute? KEVIN MCDONOUGH bring you the best quality little ones. My two puppies are little ones that you will be proud to show off to your friends. Due to my promotion and work schedule, I hardly find time to spend with these babies. There are both male and female called Bailey and Daisy. Daisy the female is an adorable little short coat girl. She has what it takes to make people wish they had found her first. Daisy loves to wag her tail!!! She enjoys people to the fullest. She has a classic look that people search for in a Chihuahua. Daisy is charting to be 4 1/2 pounds full grown. She is available and can be yours to love.

 The second little Bailey is a tiny purse baby. He is charting to be only 4 pounds full grown! He will need tender loving care. Bailey is an adorable baby and will bring much joy to your family. I welcome every interested persons for these puppies.

The Sputnik satellite ushered in a new era of high-tech gadgets

With a series of small beeps from a spiky globe 50 years ago, the world shrank and humanity's view of Earth and the cosmos expanded.

Sputnik, the first artificial satellite, was launched by the Soviets and circled the globe on Oct. 4, 1957.

The Space Age was born, and what followed were changes to everyday life that people take for granted.

Communications satellites bring wars and celebrations from thousands of miles away into our living rooms. Weather satellites show us whether we need to carry an umbrella or flee a hurricane. Global positioning system satellites even keep us from getting lost on unfamiliar streets.

When Sputnik was launched, the public thought a space future would consist of gigantic space stations and colonies on the moon and other planets.

"The reality is that the things we expected did not come to pass, and the things that we did not fathom changed our lives in so many ways that we cannot even envision a life that's different at this point," said Roger Launius, senior curator at the Smithsonian Institution's National Air and Space Museum.

America got a taste of that in May of 1998, when just one communications satellite malfunctioned.

More than 30 million pagers went silent. Credit card payment approvals didn't work. National Public Radio and CNN's Airport Television Network went off the air.

"The civilization we live in today is as different from the one that we lived in in the mid-1950s as the mid-1950s were from the American revolution," said Howard McCurdy, an American University public policy professor. "It's hard to imagine these things happening without space. I guess I could have a computer, but I wouldn't be able to get on the Internet."

All thanks to an 184-pound metal ball with spikes shot into space by a country that doesn't exist anymore.

Spy satellites also let countries keep an eye on their enemies.

"Except for crazy guys in air-planes, nobody can pull off a sneak attack," McCurdy said. "I think it made the world much less dangerous than it was in 1956."

Henry Lambright, a professor at Syracuse University, said satellites have had practical benefits, but "the more important benefits are looking at Earth as a whole and looking outward at Earth in the cosmos."

Initial pictures of Earth from space were embraced by an environmental movement to show how fragile the planet is.

"The launch of Sputnik actually triggered heightened interest among the American people, not only in space, but in science, mathematics and education," said White House science adviser John Marburger. "It also opened up people's eyes to the possibility that space could actually be used for something."

Online video games are big business, and cheating is rampant

Some players give themselves the ability to see and shoot through walls. Others find a way to fly, making them nearly impossible to defeat.

Cheating like this in video games has a long and even respected tradition. Games have often included ways — intentionally or not — for sophisticated players to hack into the software and then skip levels or take on supernatural powers.

But these days, the subject is getting a more serious look. Unlike older games, today's are networked to be played with strangers over the Internet. And now, real money is at stake. Fantasy games like "World of Warcraft" and computer environs like "Second Life," to name a few, have their own currency or other virtual valuables that can be traded for hard U.S. dollars.

In other words, hacking into a video game to cheat can be a business strategy, so clamping down on it could be a key to maintaining virtual worlds' economies and reputations. But can it really be stopped?

Hacking into a video game to cheat can be a business strategy, so clamping down on it could be key.

"What I've always said is: It'll go away the same time crime goes away," said Tony Ray, founder of Even Balance Inc., which makes a cheating-detection software called Punkbuster. "There's always somebody trying to get around the rules."

Perhaps, but Gary McGraw and Greg Hoglund, authors of the new book "Exploiting Online Games," argue that video game makers could do much more to stop it.

Complex games operate partly on central servers run by the game companies and partly on a player's own computer. Essentially, the individual computer reports back to the game on the mouse clicks or trigger pulls performed by the player, and the game registers the appropriate response. That's where cheating hacks often occur: Tell your computer to report 100 trigger pulls for every one actually made, and you've turned a pistol into a machine gun that racks up points much faster.

McGraw and Hoglund offer ideas for how game makers could seal up such holes. And they argue that the entire software industry needs to be watching, since these "massively multiplayer online role-playing games" are at the leading edge of computing.

"The kinds of problems that they are facing right now are direct indications of the kinds of software security problems we can all face in the coming years," McGraw said.

Most online game companies appear resigned to the fact that cheating will occur, so they try to block it by observing game play and looking for suspicious things.

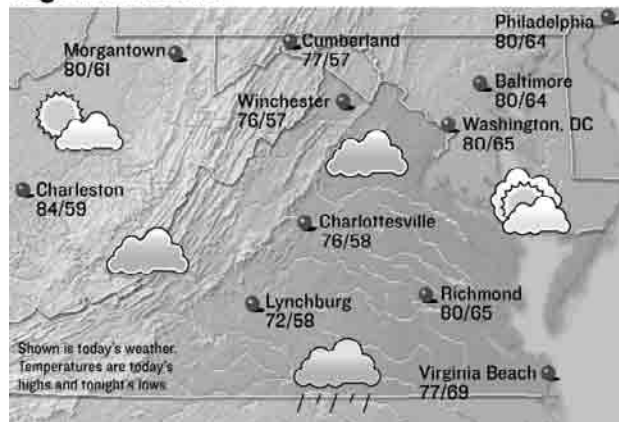

Nexon America Inc. employs a team of workers who actively look for cheating in its games, including "KartRider" and "MapleStory."

"It's a daily battle that ultimately we have to win," said Nexon's director of operations, Min Kim. "It's just the cost of doing business at this point." BRIAN BERGSTEIN (AP)

Nike's Native Kicks

Athletic company targets tribal obesity with a new shoe

Nike has unveiled what it said is the first shoe designed specifically for American Indians, an effort aimed at promoting physical fitness in a population with high obesity rates.

The Air Native N7 is designed with a larger fit for the distinct foot shape of American Indians and has a culturally specific look. It will be distributed solely to American Indians; tribal wellness programs and tribal schools nationwide will be able to purchase the shoe at wholesale price and then pass it along to individuals, often at no cost.

"Nike is aware of the growing health issues facing Native Americans," said Sam McCracken, manager of Nike's Native American Business program. "We are stepping up our commitment ... to elevate the issue of Native American health and wellness."

Nike said it is the first time it has designed a shoe for a specific race or ethnicity. It said all profits from the sale of the shoe will be reinvested in health programs for tribal lands, where problems with obesity, diabetes and related conditions are near epidemic levels in some tribes.

Nike designers looked at the feet of more than 200 people from more than 70 tribes nationwide and found that in general, American Indians have a much wider and taller foot than the average shoe accommodates. The average shoe width of men and women measured was three width sizes larger than the standard Nike shoe.

As a result, the Air Native is wider with a larger toe box. The shoe has fewer seams for irritation and a thicker sock liner for comfort.

Jerry Bread, outreach coordinator for the Native American Studies program at University of Oklahoma, said the idea was "fantastic" and addressed a core issue for tribes, FORGET THE AIR JORDAN: Sam McCracken, manager of Nike's Native American Business programs, holds the Air Native N7.

“It will get a lot of support from tribal people. We stand to profit from it in our physical health and well-being.”

JERRY BREAD, NATIVE AMERICAN STUDIES OUTREACH COORDINATOR

though he was skeptical that the feet of people from so many tribes could be so similar.

"It's an excellent gesture, and I know it will get a lot of support from tribal people," Bread said. "We stand to profit from it in our physical health and well-being."

Dr. Kelly Acton, director of the national diabetes program for Indian Health Services, said she was dubious of working with a corporation at first but said she was delighted with the result, saying Nike "bent over backwards" to respect public health needs.

The N7 name is a reference to the seventh-generation theory, used by some tribes to look to the three generations preceding them for wisdom and the three generations ahead for their legacy.

The design features several "heritage call-outs" as one product manager described it, including sunrise to sunset to sunrise patterns on the tongue and heel of the shoe.

The company anticipates selling at least 10,000 pairs and raising $200,000 for tribal programs. At $42.80 wholesale, it represents less of a financial opportunity than a goodwill and branding effort.

"The reason I like it is that, even if there's not a big Native American market, it gives people the impression there is a constituency that deserves attention," said John Dickson, a member of the executive council of the Native American Leadership Alliance in Washington, D.C. SARAH SKIDMORE (AP)

Workplace Issues

“How to Deal” columnist LILY GARCIA was online Tuesday and discussed workplace and human resources issues.

My boss, to say the least, gets fired up very easily. The VP of our company recently asked me to come up with a bulleted list of all the reasons I feel like I can't trust my boss. I told him I feel uncomfortable doing so, but he didn't really seem to care. What should I do? The VP's intentions are good, but you know what they say about the road to hell. Rather than listing the reasons you cannot trust your boss, list the changes that you would like to see in his/her behavior. Be as constructive as possible, offering concrete examples of the ways in which the current behavior is negatively impacting your ability to effectively do your job.

What's the appropriateness of telling your boss about a rival offer, with the hope of getting a salary increase? I'd rather stay with my current company, but another company offered me $10,000 more. It's extremely risky. You risk alienating your current employer and appearing opportunistic and manipulative. If you need or deserve more money, you should make the business case to your current employer about why and how much.

How does one appropriately leave a job to be a stay-at-home parent? I returned recently from taking leave after my son was born. I'm thinking that within the next year I want to quit to stay at home.

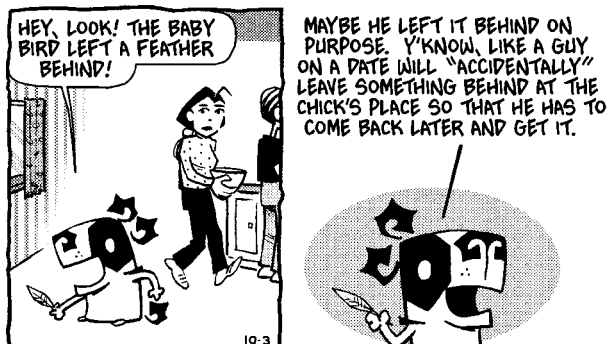

Give them plenty of notice. If you trust your supervisor, you can tell him or her several months in advance that being a stay-at-home caregiver is your goal.

Horoscope

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You're going to have to make up your mind early on if you expect to proceed according to schedule. Two plans compete for your favor.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Your steady, dependable manner is much appreciated at this time—especially by those whose affairs are closely linked to yours.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Seek and ye shall find—or, if not, you will certainly get closer to something you've been after for some time. Be cautious.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You may inadvertently cause strife between two people who are very close to you. What you begin, it is up to you to stop.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) You mustn't put all your eggs in one basket; diversify, and you're sure to enjoy success in at least one important endeavor.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) You want to spend more time with those who offer you more in the way of understanding and tolerance. Friendships needn't be so much effort right now.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You'll be attracted to an unusual form of physical activity. You may find it impossible to explain what is really happening.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You'll find yourself looking back to a better time, but the fact is that right now things are looking up for you and may be better than ever.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You're likely to be more vulnerable than you think, so you will want to steer clear of obvious dangers — at home and at the workplace.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You and a Leo native will have a chance to put your heads together and come up with a valuable solution to a long-term problem. Kudos to you both.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You must concentrate on those aspects of your personality that are not so easily understood. Focus deep within and you'll solve a puzzle.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You'll find yourself walking a kind of emotional tight-rope before the day is out. Someone close to you can point out hazards along the way.

Kevin Federline's attorney claimed Spears had skipped a test, but, said Trope, "there's no evidence she actually failed." (AP)
